Harris attended Howard University, a renowned historically Black university in Washington, D.C., where she studied political science and economics. She then went on to earn a law degree from the University of California, Hastings College of the Law.

Trailblazing Career

Harris's legal career began in the Alameda County District Attorney's office in California, where she prosecuted gang-related crimes and later became the chief of the Career Criminal Unit. In 2003, she was elected as the District Attorney of San Francisco, becoming the first woman and first African American to hold that position.

In 2010, Harris was elected as California's Attorney General, making her the first woman and the first African American to serve in that role. As Attorney General, she established a number of initiatives focused on criminal justice reform, consumer protection, and environmental enforcement.

In 2016, Harris was elected to the United States Senate, representing the state of California. She quickly became known for her sharp wit, incisive questioning, and commitment to progressive values.

Road to Vice President

In 2019, Harris announced her candidacy for President of the United States. She ran on a platform that included affordable healthcare, climate change action, and criminal justice reform. Although she did not win the nomination, her campaign inspired many Americans and raised her national profile.

In 2020, Joe Biden selected Harris as his running mate in the presidential election. The Biden-Harris ticket went on to defeat the incumbent President Donald Trump and Vice President Mike Pence.

On January 20, 2021, Kamala Harris was sworn in as the 49th Vice President of the United States, making history as the first woman, first African American, and first Asian American to hold the office.

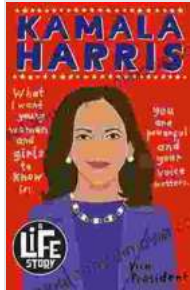

A Life of Service

Throughout her career, Kamala Harris has dedicated herself to public service. She has worked tirelessly to fight for justice, equality, and opportunity for all Americans. Her life story is an inspiration to many, proving that anything is possible with hard work, determination, and a belief in the power of service.
